To the integration of intellectual property management into the legal practice with JURIVOX^{MC}

After merging an intellectual property business into their legal practice, the management set a goal of integrating the knowledge holdings of the two organizations into one centralized database. This conversion had to occur with a high level of quality, without affecting daily activities and keeping costs to a minimum.

The organizations faced several challenges:

- Merging incompatible information management systems into a single database
- Ensuring the integrity and quality of the data during the conversion operation
- Varying levels of employee software expertise
- The two organizations were geographically separated

Solution : Jurivox^{mc}

The organizations elected to integrate all of their document management, time management, accounting and automated workflow requirements into one software application using JurivoxTM in order to reach their goal and to deal effectively with the issues involved in merging the information. By adopting a single integrated software solution, the business was able to replace multiple management systems with one powerful and easy-to-use tool.

Justification was easy:

- By adopting JurivoxTM, the organization is able to take advantage of a single common database that comprises all internal and external contacts, client records, accounting data and intellectual property filing information. This one shared source of management information is accessible from either of the two locations.
- Employees only need to learn one piece of software. It is also much easier to manage software updates when dealing with a single supplier who is familiar with the requirements of the business.
- The organization is more able to control software maintenance and technical support costs by keeping their software requirements fulfilled by a single supplier.

The organization was able to ensure a smooth and error-free consolidation of the information held by the two businesses with the help of the professional consultants at MIO
